

BATTLE OF THE BALLOTS

Buckeye Citizens Registering Their Will at The Polls

Elections in Other States—Fast Voting in New York in a Drizzling Rain—Both Sides Confident—Maryland Contest the One of Greatest National Importance.

Columbus, O., Nov. 5.—Election day in central Ohio opened with the thermometer registering 20 degrees above zero, bright sky and calm atmosphere. The early vote in Columbus was very heavy in both Republican and Democratic wards, indicating a full vote. A feature of the contest in Franklin county is the fight on Rev. Thomas Clark, author of the Clark local option bill, and candidate for re-election to the legislature. Party lines are being obliterated in voting for an against Clark. Never did the saloon element work so hard against a candidate as in the case of Clark.

Cincinnati, O., Nov. 5.—The weather here is crisp and clear and an unusually heavy early morning vote is being cast. The greatest interest centers in the county ticket. A determined fight is being made by the tax payers' association to defeat Eugene L. Lewis, Republican, who is candidate for re-election as county auditor. It is claimed that Governor Nash is being cut in the German precincts.

Cleveland, O., Nov. 5.—It is a cold, raw day, but everything indicates a full vote. The county ticket is being scratched by both parties. Owing to the neglect of coal companies to send fuel to some of the voting booths there is much discomfort and many clerks were so cold and numb they wrote names of voters with difficulty.

IN MARYLAND

Election of Greater National Importance Than Any Other State.

Baltimore, Md., Nov. 5.—Election day opened cloudy and cold. The vote was out early. Indications point to the election of candidates to the legislature who are favorable to the return of Arthur P. Gorman to the U. S. Senate. The new election law which will work against the illiterates may be the cause of trouble in the sections of the state where the negroes abound. The independent ticket is being voted very strongly. Republicans claim the entire state but fail to approximate majorities. The Democrats claim the state by 15,000 majority and the city 9,000. This contest will likely settle the political life of Mr. Gorman, one way or the other, and he is a great national factor.

Both Parties Claim New Jersey.

Newark, N. J., Nov. 5.—At Republican state headquarters Franklin Murphy, the party's candidate for Governor, and Vice Chairman E. C. Stokes today said the Republicans would carry New Jersey by 10,000 plurality. At the Democratic state headquarters in Jersey City Chairman Gorley declared the prospects were never brighter for Democratic success, and that James Seymour would be elected Governor by at least 6,000 plurality. Last year the state went Republican by 56,000.

Trenton, N. J., Nov. 5.—It is good Democratic weather in New Jersey today with every prospect for an unusually large vote. There was a trifling rainfall early in the morning and the indications point to showers through the day. This condition is favorable to the Democratic party which always manages to poll its heaviest vote in wet weather.

NEW YORK.

Fast Voting Through a Drizzling Rain Prevails.

New York, Nov. 5.—Election day found a raw, drizzling rain, prevailing but the inclement weather did not dampen the ardor of the early voters. At least, Reports from the 2099 and odd election districts in Greater New York are that a big vote is coming out and that on an average, a vote a minute was being cast. Seth Low, the fusion candidate for Mayor was still a favorite over his Democratic opponent, Edward M. Shepard, when the betting ceased at the Hoffman house in the early hours of the morning. The famous hotel has been the scene of one of the liveliest betting bees in the history of New York. Davy Johnson, Joseph Ullman and Joe Vendig had roped off a little enclosure near the bar and were busy all night taking Low money. There seemed no end of money to support the fusion candidate and it was not from professional bettors either. It came from people who had a sentimental interest in the campaign and were confident from the signs that Low would win. Nearly all the bets were made at 10 to 7 and 7 1/2 in favor of Low. It is estimated that at the Hoffman house and other hotels a total of $400,000 was wagered on the eve of election. Despite the betting the Democratic managers are confident of electing Shepard.

"We will win" says Richard Croker and his assistants re-echo this sentiment.

The Democrats say the stormy weather will help them a lot.

Up-state interest is confined largely to municipal elections. Troy, Albany, Syracuse, Rochester, Buffalo and other cities elect Mayors. Reform in municipal administration is a factor in nearly all these elections.

Voting in Ohio Cities.

Columbus, Nov. 5.—A good vote is being polled throughout the Buckeye state today, according to the advices received up to 2 p. m. at the headquarters of the Democratic and Republican state committees. The weather is propitious and a lively interest is manifest, and the managers of the two leading parties each express confidence in the result.

A big vote for an off year is being polled in Cincinnati, the proposition for the extension of the lease of the Cincinnati Southern being an important factor. At Columbus, the home of Governor Nash and Colonel Kilbourne, interest has been stimulated by the fight for and against the "local option" candidates for the legislature on the Republican ticket. The liquor interests are engineering a vigorous attack on these candidates, and the outcome is awaited with interest. A satisfactory vote had been polled up to 2 p. m. The situation at Cleveland is complicated, and strenuous efforts are being made by both sides to effect the polling of the registered vote. Toledo reports a light vote up to noon, and the Republican and Democratic chairmen are both claiming the county. Here the old centennial controversy is cutting a figure, but to what extent is unknown. Dayton, Springfield, Youngstown, Akron, Mansfield, Canton and other towns report a fair vote. In the country districts the balloting is proceeding calmly and the usual gubernatorial vote is being registered. No serious disorders have thus far been reported.

Fusion Versus Tammany.

New York, Nov. 5.—Both sides in the municipal contest are claiming the victory, but the most strenuous talk came from the fusion leaders. John A. Mason of the Shepard headquarters said he felt confident of the result, and placed the Democratic candidate's majority at 40,000. Seth Low, the fusion candidate, at his own headquarters said: "I think things could not look more rosy." Robert C. Morris, chairman of the Republican campaign committee, stuck to his estimate of 70,000 for Mr. Low. Richard Croker and John F. Carroll are positive of the election of the entire Democratic city and county tickets. Mr. Croker also claimed that Kings county would go Democratic, while Lieutenant Governor Woodruff and Otto Kemper talked of 10,000 and 25,000 respectively for the fusion candidate in that county. These estimates on the Brooklyn vote were the one discouraging feature in the fusion camp. Notwithstanding the claims of the Democrats and those of the fusionists, the election will likely be a very close one. Both sides are counting on the independent voters. At 2 p. m. a very heavy vote had been polled, and up to that hour no serious disturbance was reported.

Pennsylvania Contest.

Philadelphia, Nov. 5.—The leaders of both the Republican and fusion parties reiterate their claim that their respective candidates will carry the state. Chairman Reeder of the Republican party said that late advices received from western and northwestern counties lead him to raise his former estimate. He now says Harris and Potter, the Republican candidates respectively for state treasurer and supreme court justice, will have nearly 110,000 more than 100,000 majority. Chairman Cressy of the Democratic state committee declined to give figures, but confidently predicted the election of Coray and Yerkes, the fusion candidates for state treasurer and justice of the supreme court.

Outlook in Nebraska.

Lincoln, Neb., Nov. 5.—The outlook is not favorable for anything like an average vote, even for an off year. Chairman Lindsay of the Republican committee said: "We have conducted a thorough and systematic campaign in every precinct of the state. If we fail to elect Judge Sedgwick by an increased majority it will be simply because the voters are not brought out." Vice Chairman Scott for the Democrats predicted the election of the fusion ticket. Chairman DeFrance of the Populist committee concurred with Mr. Scott.

In Maryland.

Baltimore, Nov. 5.—Both parties claim to have the better of the situation, but the leaders refuse to give any figures. A state comptroller and a clerk of the court of appeals are the only state officers to be chosen, and most interest attaches to the election of a legislature, which will choose a United States senator to succeed George L. Wellington, who was chosen as a Republican and whose term will expire on March 3, 1903. The campaign, which was one of the shortest on record, was marked with an apathy on the part of voters that has puzzled the leaders of both parties, and left the result in doubt. A fair vote is being polled throughout the state.

Result in Iowa.

Des Moines, Nov. 5.—The Republican vote for McKinley last year was 207,818. The state central committee estimates that there will be a falling off of about 15 per cent from last year's vote. If these figures are realized Mr. Cummings' vote for governor will be in the neighborhood of 260,000, or 21,000 more than the total vote received by Leslie M. Shaw two years ago. Shaw's plurality was 56,163. Add to this figure the 21,000 additional Republican votes as estimated, and the result is a plurality of 77,000. Frank Q. Stuart of the Democratic committee is of the opinion that the Republican plurality in Iowa will be substantially lower this year.

Virginia Not in Doubt.

Richmond, Nov. 5.—Advices from various sections of the state confirm the Democratic confidence that in the election the party's state ticket will be elected by a good majority, and the Democrats will return a good working majority to the general assembly.

A Republican Claim.

Springfield, Mass., Nov. 5.—Colonel A. H. Gooding, chairman of the Republican state committee, said: "We shall be satisfied if Governor Crane receives a plurality of 50,000. The difficulty is in getting out the vote."

GAVE UP THEIR DEMAND FOR PIE

Did Xenia Work House Strikers After Living Five Days on Bread and Water.

Xenia, O., Nov. 5.—After living five days on bread and water the thirty-five striking prisoners in the city work house today waived their demand for pie at every meal and agreed to go to work again if given one square meal. The strike is now over.

Foraker Sick.

Cincinnati, O., Nov. 5.—Senator Foraker is under a physician's care, suffering from physical breakdown. He returned from Cleveland Monday much worse for his exciting and trying campaign experience. It is to be hoped however, that the Senator will soon regain his vigor.

HORRIBLE

WISCONSIN BICYCLE RIDER WITH CORPSE ON HIS BACK

Rides Into Town With a Dead Stranger's Arms Fastened Around His Neck.

New London, Wis., Nov. 5.—E. S. Wilson, of this place, rode into Hortonville yesterday with a dead man on his back.

Wilson is an agent and was canvassing the country. When two miles from Hortonville he saw a sick man staggering along the road. Wilson placed him on the bicycle in front of him. Around the stranger to put his arm around his neck and hold onto him.

The man fastened himself tightly about Wilson's neck, and the latter started to pedal the two miles to town.

When he arrived at Hortonville and stopped in front of a doctor's office, Wilson was horrified to find the stranger dead. A coroner's jury found that the stranger died of heart disease.

RICH STRIKE

Of Silver, Copper and Gold in New Localities in the Butte District, in Montana.

Butte, Mont., Nov. 5.—Several extraordinary rich strikes of silver and copper are reported from new localities in the Butte district in which the existence of mineral was practically unknown heretofore. In the Emma mine, in which prospecting has been going on for copper ore, a large silver bearing vein has been uncovered that yields more than 1,000 a ton in silver, $5 to $30 in gold and six per cent in copper. Several great strikes of copper have been made about a mile east of the old Butte copper district on what is believed to be an extension of the big veins of Butte. Great excitement has been occasioned among the miners.

IN MAIL POUCH

Two Thousand Stamps Stolen from Centerburg Postoffice, Found Near Delaware Today.

Delaware, O., Nov. 5.—About three o'clock this afternoon a mail pouch was found three miles east of this city containing two thousand stamps stolen from the Centerburg postoffice, and was brought to this city by John Wirthman. The stamps were found in a shock of corn, near where George Morris, one of the robbers was captured. Morris is now in the Mt. Vernon jail under $5000 bond. The stamps will be taken to Centerburg tonight.

MYSTERIOUS

MURDER WITH SENSATIONAL FEATURES IN CHICAGO.

Man's Body Found Crushed Into a Flour Barrel—Probable Crime of the Mafia.

Chicago, Nov. 5.—A mysterious murder, with sensational features, possibly inspired by the Mafia, confronted the police today through the discovery of a man's body crushed into a flour barrel, which was found in Iowa street, one block east of Western avenue, by laboring men going to their morning work. The head of the corpse was all but severed from the trunk, which bore marks, evidently inflicted by an axe or hatchet.

The head of the barrel was covered with coffee sacks which, when torn off, disclosed the body of a man, apparently an Italian. The chief clew to the identity of the murdered man was an envelope found in his pocket. On the back of the envelope was written the address of "Salvatore and Luigi Negro, 420 1/2 Clark street." The members of this firm, bankers, were unable to identify the body, although they suggest that it might be that of Antonio Mapali of Livermore, Iowa.

This letter found on the murdered man was written in Italian, dated August 8 and was sent from Puno Italy, by three whose names were signed. The place where the barrel was found is a prairie and isolated. The victim's feet were bound in a gunny sack and from appearances the man had been dead several hours. The banking firm art as correspondents for Italian immigrants. They said a party of 26 Italians came to Chicago last night from Central Iowa, and repaired to a fellow-countryman's saloon in Clark street, where they engaged in drinking. The police theory is that an old grudge was renewed and that Mapali was killed in a Mafia manner. The dead man was powerfully built and it must have taken several men to overcome him.

Years ago—almost a dozen—the body of Amelia Olsen, a domestic, was found buried in a refuse heap on the same dumping ground. The mystery of her murder has never been solved.

A fitting occupation—the tailor's. It takes a lot of push to get to the front, even in a crowded street car.

SEIZED

FRENCH SQUADRON GRABS THREE TURKISH PORTS

IN THE ISLAND OF MYTELENE, GRECIAN ARCHIPELAGO.

FRENCH ADMIRAL'S BULLETIN.

The Sultan Squels and Asks England to Interfere and Carry Out on Old Pledge.

Paris, Nov. 5.—The French squadron which was sent to make a demonstration in Turkish waters, has seized the three principal ports of the island of Mytilene in the Grecian Archipelago. The news of the seizure came in a telegram from Admiral Caillaud.

Mytilene is an island in the Aegean Sea near the coast of Asia Minor, belonging to Turkey. When the Mediterranean squadron was divided and part sent to Turkish waters it was announced that Mytilene would be the first point touched at, and that some Smyrna Jaffa and other important ports would in all probability be seized later unless satisfaction was given. The principal towns of the island are Castro, (Mytilene) and Mollivo.

Paris, Nov. 5.—According to a semi-official statement issued today France's demands on Turkey have lost all personal character and are now those of nation on nation. The statement declares that in France's demands on the Porte the claims of M. Tubini and Lorando and the Quays company are considered liquidated by the Porte's agreement to the French conditions. There remain three principal points at issue. These are first, that the religious protectorate of France in the Orient be respected. Second, that the Porte assure the free working of French schools and allows unhindered education. Third, a respect for the rights of the French medical faculty at Beyrouth and that the Porte cease interfering with the license of French practitioners in Turkey.

THE SULTAN SQUEALS.

Wants England to Fulfill Old Pledge to Help Him.

Constantinople, Nov. 5.—The porte has asked Great Britain to fulfill the terms of the convention of 1878 whereby, in exchange for the island of Cyprus, Great Britain guarantees the integrity of the sultan's Asiatic possessions. The porte claims under this convention that Great Britain should protect Asiatic-Turkey against attack by France, and suggests that Great Britain should send a squadron to the Levant for that purpose.

Paris, Nov. 5.—It is reported authoritatively here that dispatches have been received at the French capital announcing that Admiral Caillaud's division of the French Mediterranean squadron has arrived at Smyrna and seized the customs. M. Delcasse, in the chamber of deputies, said that the appearance of French cruisers off the Turkish coast had several times proved that France had not forgotten the protection showed to Christians, and the latter understood this. It was true that the reforms promised the Armenians had not been executed, that the Armenians had too often been the victims of unpunished outrages, and that oppression also reigned in Macedonia and old Servia. The French government had put forth every effort to restore justice and tranquillity, but France was not alone bound by the treaty of Berlin. The chamber could rest assured that the government would never forget its duties towards humanity. But it must first of all remember its duties towards France. The foreign minister's statement was greeted with applause. The chamber then voted confidence in the government.

Her Fears Alleviated.

Suddenly a pale, agitated woman appeared before the genial landlord. "Sir," she exclaimed, "there are strange noises in my room. I am afraid a burglar lies hidden in the closet." "Fie upon you, madam!" quoth the landlord merrily. "Tis no burglar. 'Tis merely the spirit of a drummer who cut his throat in yon room thirty years ago."

Whereupon the woman, abashed at giving way to idle fears, thanked the landlord and returned calmly to her bed.—Indianapolis Sun.

THE REVOLVER

With Which This Woman Shot Her Husband Bought by Her at a Gun Store.

Hoboken, N. J., Nov. 5.—The police discovered yesterday they say, that Mrs. Vencedora Chartrand who killed her husband, John Chartrand last Thursday morning bought the revolver with which she did the shooting at Noltes' gun store the preceding day. This discovery the police declare disproves Mrs. Chartrand's story that her husband gave her the revolver when he was about to start on a hunting trip and that she accidentally shot him while she had her arms around his neck kissing him good bye. Mrs. Chartrand is in the Hudson county jail on a charge of murder.

PROCLAMATION

OF BOARD OF HEALTH REGARDING SMALL POX.

All Schools, Churches and Places of Public Amusement to be Closed Until Disease is Stopped.

Newark, O., Nov. 5, 1901.

To the Citizens of Newark: Owing to the alarming increase in the number of cases of small pox in the city within the past week, and these cases being cared for in private homes in different parts of the city, it has been decided that immediate action on the part of the citizens is necessary in order to stamp out the disease. It is therefore ordered that all schools, public, private and parochial, churches and all places of amusement be closed, and the assembling of citizens in public places be prohibited until there is no longer any smallpox in the city. By order of the Board of Health.

DR HENRY DAY, Health Officer.

INDIGNANT

DENIAL IS MADE BY MRS. ROOSEVELT.

Of the Story That Expenses for Gowns Were Confined to Three Hundred Dollars a Year.

New York, Nov. 5.—A Washington dispatch to the Evening Telegram says:

Mrs. Roosevelt has been subjected to much annoyance by an interview purporting to have been had with her in the White House, printed in several newspapers about a fortnight ago and copied all over the country and abroad.

In this publication the wife of the President was made to say that she dressed on $300 a year, and to go into details as to how she "made over" her gowns. It was also told that Mrs. Roosevelt made her children's clothes last by passing "Teddy's" outgrown suits to Kermit and then on to Quentin. The absurdity of this was patent to all of Mrs. Roosevelt's acquaintances, but there were hundreds of persons who did not see it in that light. The White House mail has been deluged with letters from women addressed to the President's wife, asking for information as to how she can now, as the wife of the Chief Magistrate, when she will have to attend so many dinners, teas, &c., get along on $300 a year. Farmers wives in the far West wanted to know how she could make one suit do for three romping boys.

The story travelled so far, was so generally believed and the annoyance became so great that a denial of the yarn was made at the White House today.

Mrs. Roosevelt's private matters are her own, but it is palpably absurd that she should limit her wardrobe expenditures to $300, or to any sum near that, and it is equally absurd that her wardrobe and its price should be discussed at all.

Mrs. Roosevelt spends as much more than $300 a year for dress as her station and tastes demand.

Policemen in Vienna must be able to swim, row a boat and understand telegraphing.

BOLDEST

ROBBERY EVER KNOWN IN CITY OF CINCINNATI

TEN THOUSAND DOLLARS IN DIAMONDS STOLEN.

FROM THE DUMME JEWELRY CO.

Boulder Thrown Through Large Plate Glass Window and Thieves Run Off With the Diamonds.

Cincinnati, O., Nov. 5.—The boldest robbery ever known in this city was committed between 1 and 5 o'clock this morning. Thieves threw a boulder through the large plate glass window of the Duhme Jewelry Company on Fourth street and secured diamonds and other jewels valued at from $20,000 to $25,000, which were displayed in a side window. A watchman was in the store at the time, but did not hear the crash. A number of diamonds were picked up on the street after dark light, having been dropped by the robbers in their haste to escape.

There is absolutely no clue to the diamond robbers, who left a trail of diamonds in the street for a block, as they ran.

Herman Keck, president of the company said: "We are out about $20,000 if we don't get our diamonds back. It is the third time we have lost diamonds. There is no such thing as insuring jewelry in show windows. Had I carried the display in the safe at night I could have gotten burglar insurance, but there is no allowance for goods in show windows. The entire window contained about $60,000 worth of stock. I was warned against robbers, but felt secure. I had a night watchman and there are 1,000 small electric lights besides three big arc lights in front of my store. The lights burn all night and were burning when the robbery occurred."

GREATLY SHOCKED

Will be Friends of Cyrus W. Anderson Telegraph Operator, to Learn of His Death.

Cyrus W. Anderson, one of the best known telegraph operators in Newark, died at his home 103 Valandigham street at 5:30 Monday night, after a two-weeks' illness with typhoid fever. This news will come as a terrible shock to the hosts of friends of the deceased, who did not know of his serious illness.

Mr. Anderson had been ailing for about a month, but only took to his bed two weeks ago. The disease made rapid headway, and all effort to stay its ravages failed.

The deceased was born in Zanesville, March 17, 1863. After attending the public schools, he learned the trade of telegraphy, and was soon known as an expert operator. He worked in Buffalo, Columbus, Cleveland, Cincinnati, and Pittsburg.

For the past 17 years he has been in the employ of the B. & O. in Newark, holding a responsible position in the depot office.

On April 5th, 1888, he was married to Miss Julia Bush who, with two children, Annie aged 11, and Willie, aged 9, survives. There are also two brothers, Joseph of Buffalo, and Charles of Newark, and seven sisters, Mrs. A. Goldsmith of St. Louis, Mrs. F. McClellan, Milford, Delaware, Mrs. James O'Hare, and Mrs. W. B. Smith, Columbus, Mrs. W. W. Platt, Utica, O., Mrs. Frank Smucker and Mrs. Jacob Pfeiffer of this city.

Every one who knew "Cy" Anderson was his friend. In business he was capable and accommodating, in social life he was genial and whole-souled, in his home he was a kind husband and indulgent father. The family have the sympathy of their friends and his in this dark hour of bereavement.

The funeral will take place from the late home at 2:30 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, Rev. Frank Granstaff conducting the services.

A bill may be pretty steep and still be on the level.

Turkeys are getting fat.

THE COST OF ADMIRAL SCHLEY'S TRIAL.

The word "trial" is used advisedly in reference to the cost of the naval court of inquiry now in session investigating the matters connected with the sea battle of Santiago. The conspirators in the navy department have made it a trial of Admiral Schley as far as they had the cunning and the power—as much so as if he had been resting under actual charges.

It is stated that the trial will cost Admiral Schley not less than $20,000. It is understood that his payments to his counsel will not be as large as in ordinary cases and may be merely nominal. All the lawyers on his side of the case, including the late Judge Wilson, were his close personal friends, and as they knew from the start that he was not a rich man their charges, if any, will be moderate. But other expenses will be immense.

It is shocking to contemplate some of the features of the Schley case. He is a veteran of the navy with a distinguished record for over forty years.

He rendered valuable service in the civil war when he had just graduated from the naval academy. In 1865 he participated in the suppression of a coolie insurrection on Chiriqui islands off the coast of Peru, where our government was called on to protect American investors in large guano deposits. In the same year he landed with a body of marines on the coast of San Salvador to guard the interests of American traders in the town of La Union, the scene of a revolution. In 1872 he was with the Pacific squadron which assisted in quelling the Korean outbreak against the treaty powers. In 1876 he was sent in the Essex to the south seas in quest of a missing seal vessel and rescued the shipwrecked crew from the scene of their sufferings on an antarctic island. In 1884 he was in command of the relief expedition which brought Greeley and his band of arctic adventurers through 1,400 miles of icy seas back to civilization. Other events of his life are of recent history.

By the malicious intrigues of the navy department clique, conniving with Admiral Sampson, there was an attempt to rob Admiral Schley of the laurels which he gained at Santiago, where his victory was one of the greatest ever gained on the ocean.

The discussion which followed involved so many indecencies of assault and such volumes of falsehood that he was compelled to ask for this inquiry which is resulting in his brilliant vindication.

He should not be forced to bear the expense of this vindictive and groundless proceeding. Congress should reimburse him for the amount which it will cost him. He is not a rich man. For the best part of his life serving on the ocean, he has had no opportunity to accumulate wealth beyond his modest savings from his salary. The country will be glad to pay through a congressional appropriation the amount of his expenses in this inquiry.

A GREAT DEBT TO GEN. LEE

That the Civil War Ended as It Did Without the Scenes of Horror That Now Afflict South Africa.

(Pittsburg Post.)

An address by Charles Francis Adams, before the American Antiquarian society at Worcester, Mass., last week, has attracted much attention. It relates to a debt of gratitude the people of the United States owe to General Lee that the great Civil War ended as it did, without the scenes of horror, devastation and bloodshed that mark what appears to be the winding up of the South African war. It recalls an important chapter in American history, and the significance of it has been rarely referred to.

When the civil war ended there was the greatest bitterness between the sections. The South was under the humiliation and sting of defeat. The slaves had been emancipated. Mr. Adams says: "The inhabitants were as one man disfranchised. When they laid down their arms, they had before them, first, a military government, and after that the supremacy of their former slaves. A harder fate for a proud people to accept could not be imagined. The bitterness of feeling, the hatred was extreme." It had its counterpart in the North, in the fierce anger following Lincoln's murder. Conditions were much the same as existed in South Africa when Pretoria was captured. Jefferson Davis and a great many of his adherents believed in waging a guerrilla war against the Union armies. It was proposed that the Confederates should scatter to their states, and from their mountain fastnesses war against the invading armies. In the darkest period of the Revolution Washington had the same purpose in view in case his army was defeated and the success of the British armies became an assured fact. After the fall of Richmond, and before Lee's surrender, such a course seemed to many of the South to be the certain result. Says Mr. Adams:

It is well known that, in the face of disaster, Jefferson Davis had not for an instant given up the thought of continuing the struggle. To do so was certainly practicable. Foreign opinion for instance, was on this point settled: it was assumed as a certainty of the future that the conquest of the Confederacy was impossible. The English journals had always maintained, and still did maintain, that the defeat of Lee in the field, or even the surrender of all the Confederate armies, would be but the close of one phase of the war and the opening of another phase—the final phase being a long, fruitless effort to subdue a united people in a region so vast that it would be impossible to penetrate every portion of it, much less to hold it in subjection. As an historical fact, the scale on the 9th of April, 1865, hung wavering in the balance; a mere turn of the hand would decide which way they were to incline. Thus, on the morning of that momentous day it was an absolutely open question, an even chance, whether the course which was actually pursued should be pursued, or whether the leaders of the Confederacy would adopt the policy which President Kruger and General Botha and DeWet have in South Africa more recently adopted, and are now following.

On the morning of that momentous day there is no doubt that it was an open question—an even chance, whether there should ensue such a war as is now raging in South Africa. This was the question presented to General Lee. He was the sole arbiter. His influence and power with the soldiers of the Confederacy was incredibly greater than that of Jefferson Davis, who was known to favor a continuance of the war from the mountain regions of the South, or by a forced retreat west of the Mississippi into Texas. General Alexander, who was chief of artillery of General Lee's army, sought an interview with the general on that fateful morning. He had reached the conclusion, as he afterwards informed Mr. Adams, that the army of Northern Virginia, while nominally captured, must in reality disperse, the soldiers should return to their States and report to the governors, with a view to future resistance. We quote from Mr. Adams what ensued on his visit to General Lee, and the submission of his plan of guerrilla war:

General Alexander finally had come to the conclusion that there was but one course to pursue. The army of Virginia, while nominally capitulating, must in reality disperse, and those composing it should be instructed, whether individually or as a part of detachments, to get to his own State in the most direct way and shortest possible time, and report to the Governor thereof, with a view to further and continuous resistance.

Thus, exactly what is now taking place in South Africa was to take place in the Confederacy. General Alexander told me that, as he passed his batteries on his way to headquarters, the men called out to him, in cheery tones, that there were still some rounds remaining in the caissons, and that they were ready to renew the fight. Riding rapidly to his destination, General Alexander found Lee seated on the trunk of a fallen tree before a dying campfire. He was dressed in uniform. Full of the idea which dominated his mind, Alexander said that he sprang from his horse and, advancing to Lee, knelt down beside him, leaning against the log on which he was seated, and proceeded almost at once to propound his plan for it seemed to him the only plan worthy of consideration. As he went on General Lee, looking steadily into the fire with an abstracted air, listened patiently. Alexander said his full say. A brief pause ensued, which Lee finally broke in somewhat these words: "No, General Alexander, that will not do. You must remember we are a Christian people. We have fought this fight as long as and as well as we knew how. We have been defeated. For us as a Christian people there is now but one course to pursue. We must accept the situation; these men must go home and plant a crop, and we must proceed to build up our country on a new basis. We cannot have recourse to the methods you suggest."

I remember being deeply impressed with Alexander's comment, as he repeated these words of Lee. They had evidently burned themselves into his memory. He said: "I had nothing more to say. I felt that the man who had soared way up above me—he dominated me completely. I rose from beside him; silently mounted my horse, rode back to my command and waited for the order to surrender."

Then and there Lee decided its course of the Confederacy. And I take it there is not one solitary man in the United States today, North or South, who does not feel that he decided it.

The army of Northern Virginia laid down its arms on this 9th of April. What General Joe Johnston would do in North Carolina was still an open question, but the action of General Lee decided him. Says Mr. Adams:

The army of Northern Virginia, it will be remembered, laid down its arms at Appomattox on the 9th of April. What Johnston might do was still open to question, but Lee's act decided him. There is a vivid description in Pollard's book, I think, of an interview which immediately after Lee's surrender took place between Jefferson Davis and Johnston at the headquarters of the latter. The two had met to consider the situation. Davis, stubborn in temper and bent on a policy of continuous irregular resistance, developed his plan with much earnestness. Johnston mutely listened to him. Finally, the ex-president of the Confederacy lapsed into silence. Johnston then said: "Mr. President, to you wish my opinion?" Davis intimated that he was there for the purpose of receiving it. Thereupon Johnston brought the conversation to a close with these pregnant words: "Mr. President, the South feels that it is whipped, and is tired of the war." We all know what followed.

This tells the story. General Lee assumed the responsibility and determined the question. The surrender was made in good faith. There were no attempts at partisan or guerrilla war in Texas or elsewhere. His influence and counsel dominated the South. Mr. Adams comments:

Indeed, recalling the circumstances of that time, it is fairly appalling to consider what in 1865 must have occurred had Robert E. Lee then been of the same turn of mind as was Jefferson Davis, or as implacable and unyielding in disposition as Kruger or Botha have more recently proved. The National Government had in arms a million men, inured to the hardships and accustomed to the brutalities of war; Lincoln had been freshly assassinated; the temper of the North was thoroughly aroused, while its patience was exhausted. An irregular warfare would inevitably have resulted, a warfare without quarter. The Confederacy would have been reduced to a smouldering wilderness—to what South Africa today is. In such a death grapple the North, both in morale and in means, would have suffered only less than the South. From both sections that fate was averted.

It is not my purpose to enter into any criticism of the course of events in South Africa, or of the policy there on either side pursued. It will be for the future to decide whether the prolonged, irregular resistance we are witnessing is justifiable, or, if justifiable, whether it is wise. Neither of these questions do I propose to discuss. My purpose simply is to call attention in view of what is now taking place elsewhere, to the narrow escape we ourselves, 36 years ago, had from a similar awful catastrophe. And I again say that, as we look today upon Kruger and Botha and DeWet, and the situation existing in the Transvaal and the Orange Free State, I doubt if one single man in the United States, North or South—who he participated in the civil war, or was born since that war ended—would fail to acknowledge an infinite debt of gratitude to the Confederate leader, who, on the 9th of April, 1865, decided as he did decide, that the United States whether Confederate or Union, was a Christian community, and that his duty was to accept the responsibility which the fate of war had imposed upon him—to decide in favor of a new National life, even if slowly and painfully to be built up by his own people under conditions arbitrarily and by force imposed on them.

BURNED AT THE STAKE.

Fate of an Unknown Negro Who Assaulted a White Woman. Gulfport, Miss., Nov. 5.—An unknown negro was burned at stake in Perry county for assault on Mrs. Fortenberry. She is the wife of one of the most prominent men in that section. She was attacked, beaten into unconsciousness and criminally assaulted by the negro. After recovering consciousness, while yet almost too weak to move, she began crying for help. Within a short time assistance reached her. She told the story of the crime and described the negro. A posse was organized and search was begun for the criminal. A negro answering the description given by Mrs. Fortenberry was caught, taken and identified by her. She stated positively that he was the man who had committed the crime. The negro then made a confession, telling all the details he had previously denied. He was carried to the scene of his crime and burned.

Fog in London.

London, Nov. 5.—Had the fog not lifted somewhat toward night London would have been so congested that its housing resources, commodious as they are, would have been taxed beyond their limits by the forced accommodations of the fog-bound suburbanites. Among children and old people the deleterious effects of such a continuous and exceptional fog can scarcely be estimated. Several theaters were obliged to close. Several small street robberies have been reported, many victims being stunned by sandbags. Two express trains had narrow escapes from collision.

Coke Short.

Pittsburg, Nov. 5.—Eighteen blast furnaces in the Pittsburg district and the Mahoning and Shenango valleys have or are about to close down for want of coke. The car and motive power shortage on the railroads is responsible for this condition. Suspension of these blast furnaces will cut off the pig iron production over 5,000 tons daily and will throw about 1,500 men idle. No relief is in sight, and it is probable other furnaces will have to close, with the result that iron and steel mills will be materially affected.

Chamberlain Rebuked.

Berlin, Nov. 5.—The students of the University of Griefswald have sent to other universities the resolutions recently adopted by them in denunciation of the alleged offensive references to the conduct of the German troops in 1870 made by Mr. Chamberlain. They ask the co-operation of the other universities in their rebuke. The Berlin branch of the Society of German Students has telegraphed to the Griefswald students congratulations upon their protest against "an insult to our valorous army."

Religious Hulp.

Union City, Ind., Nov. 5.—A novel though somewhat vigorous method was employed here by Elder Z. T. Sweeney of Columbus, Ind., to raise a church debt. After preaching the dedicatory sermon in the new Christian church of this place he instructed the janitor to lock the doors and bring him the key, after which he announced that none could leave the building until $1,200 had been raised. The plan worked well, for in a very short time the sum of $1,500 was forthcoming.

Vessel on a Shoal.

Chatham, Mass., Nov. 5.—A square-rigged vessel was sighted ashore on Handkerchief shoal. The bark Benjamin F. Hunt Jr., Rosario for Boston, has been anchored west of the Handkerchief, and possibly she may have attempted to get under way and was carried onto the shoal.

MRS. JACK'S BEAR STORY

"Jack has always said that my physical courage first attracted him. The way of it was this: We arrived at Fort Whoop Up at dusk—Aunt Pyncheon, Cousin Tom and I—with tents, blankets and a small arsenal of rifles and ammunition.

"My aunt from the back seat of the buckboard surveyed the surroundings and said decisively, 'Please to have some one take me to my hotel.'"

"Yes, dear; we will have a passing cab and go at once," I replied.

"Just then a tall, lean man rose, apparently from the adobe and sage of the trail. He wore a frieze of gray felt which had once been a hat, held together by a rattlesnake band, and a dado of cartridge belt, hunting knife and pistols.

"I'm the runner for the Commercial House," he announced, gathering his wreck of a sombrero skillfully in one hand.

"You must have run a long way," I said, sweeping the vacant horizon with my eyes. But the military barracks occupied the small valley not a quarter of a mile distant, and as we neared it the strains of a military band floated out upon the air.

"The next day we had established what we hoped would prove to be our permanent camp on the eastern slope of Mount Head. From there you can count seventeen mountain ranges, and you might have visited them all without meeting any one else on a like pilgrimage.

"So it was a surprise to us, when we returned to camp one night, to be winked at by a strange campfire half way down the mountain. This did not please me. I had gone there for sport and solitude. The one argues the existence of the other. The fire had whirled from the same spot for a week, when we moved on to regions more remote and savage, where bear tracks honeycombed the ground and elk appeared and vanished through the aisles of pine, tossing their great antlers like the branches of an oak forest.

"I had been out all day, and, oddly enough, seen nothing but a porcupine, which waddled across my trail, fear and defiance ludicrously compounded in his bristling quills and buried gait. The sunsets in the neighborhood of Fort Whoop Up are magnificent. Every night the fires burn over Crowfoot and Tall Creek, Moose Jaw and Flathead. The peaks of Brown, Hooker and Rack go from pink and crimson into gray, but gray without a hint of coldness—ashes of roses, you might call it—and then in an instant all the light from the stars marks the spot where late the splendor shone.

"I declare, that sounds like poetry," Mrs. Jack interrupts herself to exclaim, "except that it needs something to go before it."

"Tom-ti-tum-ti-tum-ti-tum, Where late the splendor shone."

"It won't do in such shape. It reminds one of a militia company without a drum major."

"Never mind," the circle around Mrs. Jack interposes impatiently. "We are anxious to hear the story."

"I never could write poetry," Mrs. Jack concludes after more mental fumbling for something to complete the couplet. "Well, I stood overlooking the valley. Darkness was creeping up. Mount Head as the tide comes up the sands, only noiselessly. Nature has too much to do out there in the great northwest to make a fuss over anything."

"Suddenly I heard a crackling in the bushes below me. A mountain sheep? Perhaps a grizzly! How my heart thumped! I was on my knees in an instant, with my rifle at full cock. My eyes met a curious spectacle. Two bear cubs were in the act of climbing a small pine tree which looked suspiciously top heavy. Something dark lay along the tree's topmost branch—a shape which resolved itself into the figure of a man dressed in a gray Norfolk jacket, knickerbockers, golf stockings and canvas shoes. The she bear sat at the foot of the tree with the air of one to whom time is no object. One of the cubs would climb a little way, and as the tree shook ominously I was irresistibly reminded of the story of the old hunter in a like predicament, who, as the bear neared the slender branch upon which he hung, cried: 'You idiot, don't come out here! You'll break the branch and kill us both!'

"I am very wary of attacking a bear with cubs. Jack says my courage on this occasion amounted to foolhardiness, for without an instant's hesitation I aimed at the foremost cub. Then I saw a rifle at the foot of the tree. Having distracted the mother and her little ones, the owner of the rifle slipped down the tree and helped me to fight. I don't know how it would have all ended if two of my guides had not joined us."

"They credited me with bringing the old bear down. If I did," Mrs. Jack comments naively. "It was a pretty shot. Of course Jack—I mean the man in the tree—insisted that I had finished the whole family, and equally of course he had a great deal to say about my having saved his life. Later he assured me that it was a vain deliverance unless—unless—"

Mrs. Jack pauses, and a dash of crimson overcomes the russet of her cheeks.

"Oh, Jack, you have come!" she cries as a man approaches the small group, followed by half a dozen men in riding clothes.

"It was a stiff brush, Di. You ought to have been along."

"It may be magnificent, but it is not war," Mrs. Jack replies sentimentally as she gives her husband a cup of tea.

H. L. WILHELM

ARRIVES IN THE CITY FROM THE STATE OF WASHINGTON.

Story of American Point Where British Flag Floated in Power for Last Time.

Mr. H. L. Wilhelm, who five years ago had a law office in the Auditorium block, arrived in the city this morning from Seattle, Wash., where he has been engaged in the practice of law and doing newspaper work. Mr. Wilhelm has returned to Ohio to visit his old home and old friends, and will return to the west within three weeks. In an interesting talk on his western experience, Mr. Wilhelm said to an Advocate man this morning:

"Few people know that on San Juan Island in the State of Washington, the British flag floated for the last time in sovereign power over American territory."

It seems that during the Frazer river excitement in about 1857 the islands now embraced in San Juan county were first settled. The miners coming by way of Port Townsend made it one day's journey to San Juan island and another from there to the Frazer river by row boat. A number of miners during the rush disappeared mysteriously, and their tools were found in the hands of the Indians. July 4, 1859, the first United States flag was raised on San Juan Island, near the post of the Hudson Bay Trading Company, known as Bellevue Farm. Tales of murder brought Gen. Hearney, the Indian fighter, to the island, and he asked the settlers if they feared the red men and told them if they sent a petition to him, signed by ten settlers requesting it, he would send troops for their protection. A petition signed by thirteen bona fide settlers was sent him, when he despatched Capt. Geo. E. Pickett, later of Gettysburg fame, with a company of soldiers to the place.

"Gov. Douglass, of British Columbia the head man of the Hudson Bay Company, when he learned of Capt. Pickett's arrival, ordered the American to leave. Upon refusal, he sent the English frigate Tribune, a survey boat, the Satellite, and a Hudson Bay boat, the Beaver, to drive Capt. Pickett and his little body of soldiers away. Capt. Hornby, of the Tribune, moved his warship broadside to the hill, a quarter of a mile away, along which the American tents lay, and sent word for the commanding officer to meet him. Capt. Pickett ordered his company to arms and sent word to the Englishmen that if a meeting was desired, he could be found in his tent. Capt. Hornby then came in person and ordered Pickett to leave, which Pickett refused to do.

"Do," what would you do if I attacked you?" exclaimed the Englishman.

"Do," cried Pickett. "Why, fight until the last man; then spike the guns and die like an American."

"Capt. Hornby then returned to Victoria for consultation. Gov. Douglass in a rage ordered the captain to return at once and overpower the soldiers, take them and the settlers prisoners, and return to Victoria. The flagship, however, came in before Capt. Hornby left, and Governor Douglass being out-ranked by the admiral, the order was countermanded.

"A joint commission then agreed on joint occupation until the dispute of title could be settled. 'The contention was whether Rosario Strait or DeHaro Strait was the main channel. If it was Rosario, the land was England's; if De Haro, it belonged to the United States. An American camp of soldiers was stationed in the southern part of San Juan island, on the Hudson Bay Farm, and an English camp in the northern part, near Roche Harbor. In 1870 the dispute was ended by the German Emperor deciding the main channel to be the Straits de Haro, and the islands became United States territory."

The Best Man.

For the origin of "The best man at a wedding" we must go back many centuries, to days when it was the amiable practice of the budding bridegroom to dispense with the consent either of the lady or her father. He simply waited for a suitable opportunity to capture her and make a bolt with his bride. In this enterprise he found it helpful to have the services of a friend who would assist him in the capture and keep the pursuers at bay until he had got a sufficiently long start. This friend was the prototype of the "best man" of our own unromantic day, when his duties are limited to seeing that the bridegroom doesn't leave the ring behind him or leave the church without taking his hat with him. How times do change!

Mostly Fortissimo.

Hunt—It seems strange to me to hear you criticize your wife's reflections as barabanges. In view of the fact that in the earlier days of your married life you spoke of your wife's voice as the very soul of music.

Blunt—That's all right, too, but you see she's drifted from the Italian to the Wagnerian school.—Richmond Dispatch.

The Only One Eligible.

Papa—So, Bobby, you're the president of your bicycle club. That's very nice. How did they happen to choose you?

Bobby—Well, you see, papa, I'm the only boy that's got a bicycle.—Tit-Bits.

A statistical item of interest to women is that today women are two inches taller on an average than they were twenty-five years ago.

By She Had Learned.

"Marriage," remarked the woman of the world, "brings a man out."

"I guess that's right," sighed the unsophisticated woman. "Since I've been married my husband has been out about five nights a week."—Philadelphia Record.

Slight Resemblance.

Tom—Have a smoke, old man? Jack—Thanks. Don't care if I do. Tom—You'll find that is something like a cigar.

Jack (after a few puffs)—By George, there is a slight resemblance! What is it?

May—Oh, I would have lost so many kisses while I had my mouth open.—Chicago News.

STUDENTS PUNISHED FOR HALL-LOWE'EN PRANKS.

The Carlock-Clark Marriage—Other Items of Interest Picked Up in the College Town.

It is reported that a number of the students of Denison University have been dealt with by the faculty for complicity in the vandalism of Halloween. The punishment inflicted upon them by the faculty consisted in depriving them from the campus ground of Shepardson College and it is said that in addition to this punishment, that some of them may be expelled from the institution. A meeting of the Senate of the college is being held this afternoon.

Mr. W. Carlock, the well known saw mill man of Alexandria, and Miss Rosella Clark, daughter of the late Sylvester Clark, of this place, were married at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. John DeBow last Saturday evening, the Rev. C. L. Werk, pastor of the Presbyterian church, performing the ceremony. The newly wedded couple have the congratulations of all their friends.

Mr. E. E. Cullers, who has been sick for some time, shows no indications of a change for the better, and grave fears are entertained that he cannot recover.

Dr. King has been confined to his home on Pearl street for the past several days with sickness.

Following are the coming games to be played by the Denison foot ball team: Nov. 9, Wooster at Wooster; Nov. 16, O. W. U. at Delaware; Thanksgiving, Miami at Dayton. The members of Denison University are very much encouraged over the recent successes of their foot ball team.

Mrs. Frederick T. Eberle, and two little children, of Ft. Wayne, Ind., who have been visiting relatives in this vicinity for the past two weeks, have returned home, after having a very enjoyable visit.

A Celebrated Case.

Few criminal trials have attracted as much attention as that of Roland B. Molineux, charged with the murder of Mrs. Kate Adams. The trial, which was before Recorder Goff of New York city, lasted nearly two months and resulted in the conviction of Molineux. He was sentenced to death, but an appeal was taken by the lawyers to the supreme court of the state of New York, and now, after Molineux's confinement for eighteen months in the death cell at Sing Sing, he has been granted a new trial.

ROLAND B. MOLINEUX.

Turned the Tables.

A lecturer was once descending on the superiority of nature over art when an irreverent listener in the audience fired that old question at him:

"How would you look, sir, without your wig?"

"Young man," instantly replied the lecturer, pointing his finger at him, "you have furnished me an apt illustration for my argument. My baldness can be traced to the artificial hair of our modern civilization, while the wig I am wearing"—here he raised his voice till the windows shook—"is made of natural hair!"

The audience testified its appreciation of the point by loud applause, and the speaker was not interrupted again.

Rice and Rice.

To most people rice is rice, but not withstanding this, there is a considerable difference between the Chinese and Japanese and the American article. The former is darker in color and in no way compares with the latter in flavor or quality. Of the American, however, there are a number of grades, of which that grown in the Carolinas is considered the best. When purchasing, see that the grains are large, plump and unbroken. In washing be careful not to break them between the hands.

JOHN O'SHAUGHNESSY

Of the Regular Army, Writes an Interesting Letter to the Advocate from Fort Duchesne, Utah.

The following letter recently received by the Advocate will be read with much interest by the writer's many friends in this city

Fort Duchesne, Utah.

Editor, Advocate—Having a little time on my hands I will tell you something about this fort. It is a very pretty place although there is nothing doing at this time. The officers and their families and I think about ten other families together with 85 enlisted men of Troop H are here. We arise at 6 a. m., breakfast at 6 15, drill at 7 10. recall at 8 10 dinner 12 stable 4 35 retreat 6, supper 6 10 taps 11. We put in our spare time in hunting as there are deer wild cats catamounts rabbits and squirrel here in plenty. We have to go up the mountains a considerable distance to get a shot at a deer.
The nights are pretty cold here now
although the days are very pleasant.
Our quarters are on the south side of the fort, and we are very comfortably situated. The headquarters and post library are on the east side of the fort, the hospital and bath house on the north side and the officers' headquarters on the west side. The parade grounds which are in the center of the fort are as beautiful as any lawn, while all the roads inside the fort are lined with the largest and most beautiful lime trees I ever saw, and the drill grounds, which are in the rear of the headquarters are as sandy and barren as any desert. Yesterday seven of us took our horses and went up to the Indian village. Here I saw the greatest sight I ever witnessed. The big buck Indians were seen lounging around the village, or playing with his horse, which he thinks more of than his squaw, while the women do all the work. We had a good time but when we got back to camp were very tired.

I am in the best of health, and weigh 159 pounds. I receive the Advocate and the Catholic Columbian every week which is a great treat to me.

scribe the best, and as I know and have proven that there is nothing in Materia Medica which equals Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in severe cases of female disorders, I unhesitatingly prescribe it, and have never yet been sorry. I know of nothing better for ovarian troubles and for falling of the womb or ulcerations; it absolutely restores the affected parts to their normal condition quicker and better than anything else. I have known it to cure barrenness in women, who to-day are happy mothers of children, and while the medical profession looks down upon 'patents,' I have learned, instead, to look-up to the healing power, by whatever name it be known. If my fellow physicians dared tell the truth, hundreds of them would voice my sentiments.—Dr. W. S. Wanta, Lansing, Mich.

ZANESVILLE-NEWARK GAME.

The Zanesville Signal says of the Zanesville foot ball game played here:

The game of foot ball Saturday afternoon by teams representing Zanesville and Newark Athletic associations was a complete victory for the Newark team, the score standing 40 to 0 in favor of Newark. It was seen before the close of the first half that the Clay City boys were outclassed and it was only a question of the number of touchdowns the Newark team would make. It was early learned that the Zanesville ends were weak and Jones, Strecker and Foos made repeated gains by end runs of from 10 to 40 yards. Foos and Jones each made spectacular runs, the former for 50 and the latter 65 yards in the second half. The Zanesville line held well and only small gains could be made by bucking. Zanesville also tried in vain to pettinate the Newark line.

Break of a Bank Robber.

London, Nov. 5.—A man named Lamscombe entered the Kennington branch of the London and North-western bank and shot the cashier dead. He then called upon the clerks to deliver the contents of the till. A clerk grappled with the robber, who finding that escape was impossible, shot himself. Another clerk was wounded in the struggle.

Last White Hunting.

Mason City, Ia., Nov. 5.—C. L. Montgomery and N. S. Bird, traveling men of this city, have probably lost their lives on Clear Lake. Last Saturday the two men went duck hunting on the lake, using a small boat. In the evening a squall came up, and neither men nor boat have been seen since.

Crew Mutinied.

Panama, Nov. 5.—The crew of the Colombian gunboat Darien have mutinied, and the vessel is now in the hands of the insurgents. The Darien had been operating on the Panama side of the isthmus. She is one of the recent acquisitions to the Colombian navy and is of small size.

A GREAT SOCIETY FAD.

One of the greatest news items of the day in theatrical enterprises is the announcement that the well-known firm of Mitchell & Reid will bring to this city their $14,000 Oriental-American farce-comedy production, "A Turkish Bath." This attraction is one of the exceedingly good things of the present year, and the advance reserve seat sale should prove a record-breaker, particularly as society is always on the qui vive for anything that has secured the stamp of approval of the swell of the metropolitan centers. New York flocked to see the piece the whole of last season, Boston and Philadelphia had each six weeks of it. Mr. and Mrs. Chicago could not get enough of it this season because some of the wise managers in smaller cities held iron-clad contracts that specify "the complete 1901 production, original cast, scenery, furniture, effects, properties, rugs, tapestry and costumes." For this reason the management will not adopt the tactics of other promoters and send to the smaller cities a No. 2 company, but will give our local theater patrons identically the same big spectacle, the same gigantic "fun show," that has so successfully delighted thousands upon thousands of others who are equally as keen in appreciation of a "good thing" as are we. At Auditorium tomorrow night.

A BIRDLESS BONNET

By Edward B. Clark.

The coffee had been unusually good that morning, and as Henry Sparks rose from the breakfast table preparatory to lighting his cigar and starting for the office he said to his wife: "Eliza, you may have the fall hat you've been yearning for. Here's the ten dollars, but please in making your purchase remember my prejudice against birds in bonnets."

Eliza beamed. "All right, Henry," she said; "I'll go straight down to Mme. Capote's this morning. I can get a beauty for ten dollars, I know, and I won't have a single song bird on it."

That night after dinner Mrs. Sparks sent the maid of all work into the front bedroom to bring a box that had arrived shortly before from Mme. Capote's. Mrs. Sparks opened the box, lifted the wonderful creation and said the usual womanly thing, "Isn't it a dream?"

Henry Sparks looked at the hat quizzically. There was not perhaps expressed in his face the admiration and entire approval that Mrs. Sparks had hoped for.

"Henry," she said, "I know there's a bird's head or two and a lot of feathers in it, but Mme. Capote told me they were all made up things, mostly barnyard fowls. This head with the slate blue neck and just a touch of brown at the place where it was separated from the breast, she told me, was the head of a common domestic fowl in China. This other head, neck and breast with the soft gray plumage, Mme. Capote said, formed the upper parts of one of the birds that have been eating up the East Indian crops so fast that the poor natives have been starving to death. To buy one of these birds she declared was like dropping money into the contribution box for the benefit of the heathen. She quite touched my heart. Now, don't look that way. Every-body's wearing feathers, and I don't see why I shouldn't wear the plumage of the birds that we eat and of birds that are a pest. Yes, I know there are other feathers here, too, but they are all made up things. Mme. Capote said so, and she knows."

Henry Sparks rose from the table and took the befeathered hat out of his wife's hand and looked at it through his glasses.

"This," he said, pointing with one finger at a bird's head with beautiful steel blue feathers, "is, as I understand Mme. Capote, the head of a common Chinese domestic fowl."

"Eliza, when you wander along by some tumbling stream in the spring-time you will hear now and then a rattling cry. It is a bird's voice. It is as much a part of the time and place and of the wildness of it all as are the trees, the stream or even the April clouds overhead."

"Wander along the same stream in the heat of summer, and you hear the same rattling cry. A bird form dashes by, then stops suddenly in midflight and hovers lightly over a pool beneath. Then there is a sound of the plash of waters as a feathered form descends and plunges. There is a sensation of coolness in the sound of that plunge that tempers the heat of the August day to the wayfarer."

"Perhaps you have a legal right to wear this bird because it may have been killed in New York, where the wise legislators withdrew from this creature the protection of the law. The men who urged that it be exempt from protection were men of the kind who go into the northern woods and drag seines, dynamite streams and catch and kill thousands of fish that they may pick out the big ones for the market. The souls of these men are in their pockets."

"This bird catches a few small fish for the sustenance of itself and its young. It adds, when not on a bonnet, a living interest to every waterside. Eliza, your Chinese domestic fowl is an American kingfisher."

"Henry, Mme."

"Eliza, this bird that has been eating up the crops in India, thus causing a famine in that country, was hatched in a nest in an Illinois tree. Perhaps you have the legal right to wear it. The wise legislators of Illinois recently added this bird to the game list, so that it may be slaughtered and made into pies. The souls of the legislators were situated in their stomachs."

"This bird has stood as the emblem of peace since the world was, and yet every pot and millinery bunter in the land makes war upon it. You are a good Episcopalian, and you sometimes tell me that there is nothing more beautiful than all that pertains to the church and its teachings."

"Do you, Trinitarian that you are, know that it was in the living form of one of these murdered innocents in your bonnet that our Saviour as he stood at the side of the Baptist by the waters of Jordan? Eliza, this East Indian crop destroying, starvation producing bird is an Illinois mourning dove."

"Doubtless Mme. Capote told you that this little bunch of feathers that clasps the upturned brim of the hat came from a bird harpy of some remote region, whose daily practice it is to carry off and devour the sweet babes of doting mothers. Well, these cinnamon brown feathers with these of soft gray, dotted with darker color, represent all that is left of a hermit thrush, a bird that sings its seraphic song in the twilight northern wilderness. It is the note of this bird that Burroughs says suggests a serene religious beatitude."

"But, Henry, Mme. Capote said—"

"Eliza, there are a thousand Mme. Capotes, and most of them are liars."

But Mrs. Sparks was in tears.—Chicago Record-Herald.

A TRYING ORDEAL

We had descended into the crater of Vesuvius and were starting back. The rest of the party had gone on, but I walked to the center of the basin for a souvenir. I spent much time hunting for what I wanted and was at last startled by a wild yell from the guide, who came rushing toward me, his face distorted, his mouth open and his eyes flaming and of that disagreeable greenish color.

I stood looking at him, not knowing the cause of his strange actions.

Was the volcano about to commence another eruption and crisp us to a cinder?

By this time he had reached my side, and before I knew it he had grasped me by the throat and borne me down.

"Another sacrifice to offer to my charming queen!" he cried as he commenced dragging me toward the steep, smoking cone.

It was some time before I recovered from the surprise which this unexpected maneuver occasioned.

But at last I did and struggled to my feet.

"Come," I said, "you have carried this joke far enough."

"Ha, ha, ha!" he laughed, fighting desperately to force me up to the cone. "My pets think it is a capital joke! Don't you hear them growling for food? Come, it is your flesh, and it alone, that will appease their hunger!"

His headish eyes glared into mine, flakes of foam dropping from his livid lips.

I saw it in an instant.

I was in the hands of a raving maniac.

To plead or argue would amount to naught; nothing but strength and agility could save me from a most horrible death, for it was his intention to throw me into the mouth of the cone, there falling into the seething, boiling ocean of fire and flame beneath. I should be burned to a crisp in a second of time.

I struggled desperately, shouting the while in hope of calling back my friends to my aid.

But all my shouting was useless—lost in the mighty surroundings and the ever shifting clouds of smoke and mist, rendered their seeing me an impossibility.

My only hope was to overpower my assailant.

We were now within a few yards of the base of the cone and the heat was almost insufferable.

Clouds of smoke and flame, followed by huge pieces of blood red scoria, were vomited from the black funnel-like peak.

I was gradually forced nearer and nearer.

The perspiration started from every pore, and I became conscious that I was growing weaker and would soon have to succumb to my physical strength being no match for his—urged on by a fiendish purpose, the product of a diseased intellect.

The earth was quaking beneath our feet, the air was stifling and deeply impregnated with the fumes of gas.

My face and hands had already commenced to blister under the intense heat.

And while I was slowly losing my strength he appeared to have his augmented at every step.

I could not fight much longer. Death, in one of its most horrible forms, would in a few moments be my fate.

My sight grew dim; my brain seemed to be pierced by hot iron; my limbs refused to move.

"God help me!" I murmured.

The prayer had hardly left my lips when I felt a sudden flash of intense heat, and the same instant the hold of the maniac guide was loosened.

I opened my eyes. A mass of red-hot scoria had in its descent crushed him, a charred, shapeless heap, to the earth.

By a great effort of will I gathered sufficient strength to stagger off and reach the precipitous side of the basin, when all became a black, impenetrable void.

When I again opened my eyes, I found myself lying in bed, with my friends bending anxiously over me.

They informed me that they did not miss me until they had reached the top of the crater, and there my nonappearance was attributed to my exploring propensities, and as I had, as they supposed, an excellent guide, they felt no fear as to my arrival in due season to accompany them back to the city.

But as hour after hour rolled by and I was still absent an undefined, vague feeling for my safety ran through them and finally took such hold that they determined to once more descend the ugly pit in quest of me, which they did, at the risk of their lives, for it was late in the afternoon when they started.

Upon reaching the bottom they, after a long search, found me lying in a deathlike swoon near one side and my guide crushed to a jelly beneath the mass of scoria at the base of the cone. They let him lie where he was and after the greatest difficulty and danger conveyed me up and brought me to the city.

It was some weeks before I was able to leave my room; but, thanks to a good constitution and the indefatigable attention of my kind friends, I did at last.

And now, kind reader, can you wonder that even here, thousands of miles distant from the scene of my trying ordeal, a blood chilling thrill runs through me when I look at the old coin imbedded in its covering of scoria?—New York News.

SMALLPOX

INTERESTING DATA CONCERNING THE DISEASE.

As Given by Dr. Benjamin Lee, Secretary of Pennsylvania State Board of Health.

The Advocate publishes below an article taken from the Medical World, recognized as one of the best and most reliable scientific journals published in this country, as to the symptoms, diagnosis and treatment of small pox.

It is alleged that many doctors of Newark are derelict in reporting cases of small pox to the health authorities, and this is given for their guidance in any suspected cases:

(As there are already signs of a recrudescence of the smallpox epidemic of last winter, we placed in the hands of Dr. Benjamin Lee, the able and efficient secretary of the State Board of Health of Pennsylvania, and President of the American Public Health Association, the very full and free discussion of the subject in our pages last winter and spring, and asked him to read the same and then give our readers an "authoritative word" on the subject as a preparation for a possible reappearance of the epidemic this winter. The most useful (and interesting) form of journalism is that which first calls out the real state of mind of the profession on a given subject, and if wrong, to put it right. This is what makes "The World" so popular with the rank and file of the profession. We now take pleasure in presenting the following from Dr. Lee.—Ed.)

Editor Medical World:—I have read with mingled interest, amusement and indignation, the protracted correspondence which ran through so many numbers of your valuable journal on the diagnosis of smallpox, last winter and spring. It has been interesting as showing how wide-spread the present epidemic of this disease has been. From north, east, west and south, from Canada to Mexico, from Philadelphia to San Francisco, have your busy contributors written, giving freely of their experience and of their opinions. But it has been still more interesting as demonstrating the fact that everywhere it has made its appearance, it has uniformly presented the same mild type, so mild as to throw many practitioners, perhaps a majority of them, off their guard. In fact, the failure of the family physician to recognize his first cases has been responsible for the rapid and unusual extension of the infection. Mild epidemics of variola, or more properly speaking, epidemics of mild variola are not only nothing new, but are mentioned in all systematic works on the practice of medicine. I have in my library a treatise on practice by the Court Physician of Austria, published a little more than a hundred years ago. About one-third of the entire work is devoted to smallpox alone, showing the important position which this disease occupied in the mind of the average practitioner of that day. Just about such a form as we are now becoming familiar with is described in this book. This fact sufficiently rebuts the theory that the amelioration of the type has been due to the vaccination of successive generations. The more rational explanation, to my mind, is that this particular strain of variolous virus was imported from the West Indies during the recent war. Certainly the first cases observed in Pennsylvania possessed this history. Heat, as is well known, destroys the vitality or impairs the activity of both the vaccine and the variolous contagions. It seems rational therefore to anticipate that the subjection of either of them to a sub-tropical temperature for centuries would diminish its virulence. It will be remembered that when smallpox was first introduced among the aborigines of the New World it carried them off by thousands. At the present time or more strictly until the United States occupation in Porto Rico and Cuba, while the disease was excessive-

HORRIBLE DEATH

Charles Stevens Ground to Pieces Beneath the Wheels of a Pan Handle Train.

Charles Stevens a young man aged about 28 years, employed as hneaman for the long distance telephone, met with a terrible death about 2 o'clock Tuesday morning. No one saw the accident and it probably never will be known exactly how it happened.

He was working at Black Lick and with some others came to Newark on the B. & O. to vote today. He was about town and it is supposed started to walk out the Pan Handle tracks to East Newark, where his brother, Riley, who works in the B. & O. yards resides. When at the Moore siding, between East Main street and the canal bridge, Pan-Handle passenger No. 2, east bound, came along. He probably stepped out of the way of the passenger onto the west bound track, in front of an extra freight. He was dragged or carried nearly 300 yards, and his body was discovered by Howard Priest, who watches the crossing, just east of the depot where the Pan Handle and B. & O. cross, lying between the tracks, after the freight had passed.

The coroner was notified and the body was carried to the depot, and afterwards taken to the undertaking establishment of Bowers & Bradley, where it was prepared for burial.

The lower part of the body was terribly mangled, the legs being literally ground to pieces.

The deceased was the son of Wm. Stevens, a prominent farmer of Mary Ann township.

The funeral of Charles Stevens will take place from the home of his parents in Mary Ann township, leaving the house at 11 o'clock a. m., Wednesday morning.

British Government Orders a Change in Conditions.

SO SAYS SIR MICHAEL HICKS-BEACH.

Also intimates That the English Tax-payers Will Be Asked to Bear Additional Burdens and Make Greater Sacrifices as a Result of the Prolongation of the War.

London, Nov. 5.—Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, chancellor of the exchequer, made what is regarded as an important announcement, preparing the people of Great Britain for new taxes and fresh loans, in a speech at Bristol. After alluding to the enormous increase in the ordinary expenditures of the government, he reviewed the war taxes and said that the ever-increasing demand of the national exchequer gave reasons for careful thought and even anxiety for the future. "The cost of the war in South Africa is enormous," said Sir Michael. "It still drags. It may be, when next year comes, that I may have to ask the people of this country to bear even greater burdens and to make even greater sacrifices."

Sir Michael Hicks-Beach also announced that the government was communicating with the authorities in South Africa with a view to a change in the situation in the concentration camps and to an amelioration of their conditions.

It is now reported that Lord Roberts is anxious to retire. He has never intended to remain the full period at the war office and he is credited with a desire to pass the winter of his days in quiet retirement in India. While the war lasts, however, it is almost certain the commander-in-chief will not leave his post, reports to the contrary notwithstanding.

John Morley, speaking at Fortar, Scotland, asserted that the ordinary annual expenditures of the British government had increased £28,000,000 during the last 10 years, or, including the suspension of the sinking fund, £32,000,000. He declared that there was a real danger ahead of the country.

Buller's Famous Dispatch.

London, Nov. 5.—The Daily Express, on the authority of Dr. Miller Maguire, a famous military coach, gives what it alleges to be the authentic version of the telegram sent by General Buller to General White during the siege of Ladysmith. It is as follows: "I have failed. Unable to try again without siege operations, taking a month. Can you hold out so long? If not, I suggest your firing away as much ammunition as possible, and finally making the best terms. If you have any other alternative to suggest, I can remain where I am as long as you like." "Further dispatches were exchanged," adds The Daily Express, "and, learning that Sir George White was able to hold out, General Buller settled down to prepare to force the Tugela."

Boers Get the Guns.

Pretoria, Nov. 5.—It is now known that the Boers brought away with them the two guns captured from Colonel Benson's column in the recent engagement near Brakenlaagte, eastern Transvaal.

Interveners Dismissed.

Macon, Nov. 5.—Judge Pardee of the United States circuit court has dismissed the intervention of Robert M. Farrar et al, in case of the Central Railroad and Banking company of Georgia versus the Farmers' Loan and Trust company. The interveners claimed misapplication of $360,000 received in settlement of rental claims held by Southern railroad stockholders against the Central Railroad company. The court holds that the Central had no control of the disposition of the funds, and is therefore not properly a defendant.

Naval Officer Sentenced.

New York, Nov. 5.—E. C. Anderson, a naval contractor, convicted of attempted bribery, was sentenced by United States Judge Thomas to one year in Sing Sing prison and fined $1. Anderson had a contract to furnish brass fittings to the United States government and offered Lieutenant Wilfred Powelson, one of the naval men supervising the contract, $2,000 to approve short deliveries. After Anderson was sentenced he was granted a stay of execution pending appeal.

Two Elevators Destroyed.

The loss on the buildings is estimated at $125,000, with $62,000 insurance, and $175,000 on the grain. The grain was fully insured. One residence near by was also burned.

Governor Taft's Condition.

Washington, Nov. 5.—Secretary Root received a cable message from Governor Taft saying that, owing to the recent operation he had undergone, he would be incapacitated for duty for about three weeks. He said the operation had been successful and that his convalescence was progressing satisfactorily. ## THE GIRL AT SMITH'S

It all began one morning last June. When I was going down town to my office, I happened to look up at Smith's window and saw her looking at me. I gave only a quick glance at her that time, but her face haunted me all day long as I sat at my desk. I left the office earlier that evening, and as I began to near Smith's I looked to catch a glimpse of her should she happen to be there. Smith, by the way, is a fashionable ladies' garment maker, and so I thought she might have to be there again to attend to the inexorable demands of her dressmaker.

As I hurried on I almost trod upon a newsboy who was calling out his "extra speculums," and I jostled against an elderly man who was carrying a paper parcel—jostled with sufficient force to cause him to drop the burden. With profuse apologies I stooped and picked it up for him. He received my overtures with much calmness, looking over his glasses and screwing up his mouth till the little lines that radiated across his shaven upper lip made it look like a miniature aurora borealis. Then I continued my headlong flight, and soon I was opposite Smith's. I looked up. Sure enough, there she stood, looking down the street. I watched her. She was calm. As Tenyson says, "Her eyes were homes of silent prayer." I stayed as long as I dared, for I knew the magnetic effect on the passerby when one stops to look at anything intently, and I was jealous enough not to want any one else to look at her. One evening as I was looking at the performers by some unaccountable attraction my sight was drawn to one young woman who, in playing a subordinate part, was costumed in a nicely fitting suit of brown. What was it that made it seem familiar? It was the costume I had seen her wear as she stood one morning in Smith's window as I passed. Could it be that I had found her at last? The face did not seem quite the same, but the dress I could swear to.

This increased the mystery. As soon as the performance was over I went to the stage door, whence all the participants of the evening would leave the theater. I waited on the opposite side of the street for her to appear. I crossed and stood under the lamp that lighted the sidewalk dimly around the door. One or two that I was almost sure were she passed out into the waiting carriages, but still I did not feel fully satisfied. It was growing very late, and I was chilly from the damp air that was drifting in from the harbor. Presently the light was turned out, and all was darkness. The last carriage had rolled away some minutes before—evidently all were out who went that way—and, foiled in my search, I turned homeward once more. A great sorrow was upon me.

The next day I felt angry with her—angry for no cause of hers, but angry because I had been prevented from meeting her. I did not care to hang about Smith's, nor did I have any excuse that would take me in there. I went to my work by another route. I saw new things and met new faces and arrived at my office without having once thought of her. But all day while at my desk I kept feeling that the day had not been properly begun, and I counted the hours until the time should come when I would be free to go home and go past her again. Oh, face haunted days!

Again my plans were changed, this time through no agency of mine, for as I was leaving the office I saw in his charming little brougham my friend Robinson, who, seeing me, pulled up and said: "Here, old man, let me drive you home. Jump in here. I won't take 'no' for an answer." So I got in beside him, and we rode homeward by another route.

"Old boy," said Robinson, "you are not looking yourself. What's the matter with you? Are you in love?" "No, I think not," I replied. "Any way, I have no reason to be. I don't know of any girls in the office, not even the typewriter, and the only ones I meet during the day are the waiters, but I am not in love with them."

"You speak as though there was a bare possibility of your being in love after all. Now, what and who is it? Tell me about it. A fault confessed is half redressed, and in this case you may feel easier if you have gone, one to tell it to and to talk with about her."

"No," I protested, "I am not in love. I don't know any woman, I say."

"Well, that may all be, but you can be in love with a woman you don't know. Where have you seen her?"

"In Smith's."

"Smith's? Where's that? Not the ladies' tailor, is it?" he exclaimed in some surprise.

"Yes, I begin to think she works there, but that doesn't make any difference, does it?"

"Oh, no, I suppose not! Love will go where it is sent, if it is out of the window. But I think I know her. Let's drive around by there, and we may see her."

I was only too delighted at the prospect of seeing her, and we soon came near Smith's. We were both on the lookout for my divinity.

Fortune favored us. There she stood. My heart beat fast, but Robinson laughed loudly.

"Oh, oh, I thought I knew her! You fool! That's the wax face lay figure they fit and display dresses over."

The subsequent items of my biography are of no public interest. I have not been in love since. I have had enough of it.

QUITE SATISFACTORY.

A Pleasant Social Episode In the History of an Arizona Town.

"Sir," began the Arizona terror as he brought his broncho to a halt in front of the shanty occupied by Deadwood Dick—"sir, I am in search of a gentleman."

"What's his name?" languidly asked D. D.

"Deadwood Dick, I believe. Ever heard of him?"

"A few times."

"And is he a gentleman or not?"

"He are, and I'll bet on it."

"Will he fight like a gentleman?"

"He will."

"And will you tell him for me that another gentleman wants to see him out yere with a gun in his hands?"

"Sartin, and here goes."

And after the row was over and the victims buried the city marshal paused with his glass at his lips to say to the men ranged along the bar:

"Waal, boys, I've expected this for a week or more. This is no town for a gentleman so durned stuck up that he wants to put on a clean shirt to be shot in."

Melodrama.

"But," hissed the heavy villain, "suppose our plot should leak out?"

After Their Money's Worth.

"It's a mighty good thing," commented the manager of the continuous vaudeville house, "that we don't run all night and right along up to the beginning of the next day's show."

"Why?" asked the unsophisticated one.

"Because," answered the manager, "some of the jays that come here would starve to death trying to get their money's worth if we did."—Chicago Post.

Pleasantly in Passing.

"Well, I declare," remarked the thin man who was being uncomfortably crowded by a very stout person, "the trolley company ought to charge passengers by weight."

"Think so?" retorted the stout person.

"At that rate it wouldn't be worth their while to take you on at all."—Philadelphia Press.

"Don't you think it will rain today?" said Mr. Meekton's wife casually.

"My dear," said Leonidas, "would you object to repeating that sentence?"

"For what purpose?"

DR. J. W. WALDON

Formerly of Newark Closes the Fifth Year of His Pastorate in Athens, Georgia.

The Athens, Ga., Banner of November 2, contains the following relative to Dr. Julius W. Walden, formerly pastor of the Second Presbyterian church of this city, and will be read with interest by many Newark people.

Dr. Julius W. Walden, pastor of the Presbyterian church, closed the first five years of his pastorate Sunday evening, appropriate services being held at the church.

The sixth year of his splendid work as a minister in this city opens with a new movement that will doubtless do much good. The congregation decided to employ an assistant minister to take charge of the mission work in Athens and vicinity. This work will take in East Athens, Barberville, Pethaven and all general missionary work in the city.

Rev. W. J. McMillan of Louisville, Tenn., will in all probability take charge of this work. He will be heard from in a few days. The church is enthusiastic in the matter and when the call was made for money with which to cover the expenses of the new work the congregation subscribed readily more than was asked.

Santos-Dumont, contended that he had not won the prize owing to the time limit. Prince Roland Bonaparte on behalf of the special committee who watched the contest declared that M. Santos-Dumont had materially and morally won the prize, because a new regulation as to the time limit was never officially imposed by the Aero club.
